For over twenty years, Asialink has been promoting understanding between Australia and its Asian neighbours, through high quality programs in the broad field of public diplomacy.

Senator The Hon Bob Carr, Australian Foreign Minister, Sydney, 26 October 2012

Asialink [is] making a significant contribution to… better understanding and policy-making between ASEAN and Australia. By exploring issues of common concern and creating new strengthened networks of leaders in ASEAN and Australia, Asialink Conversations has much to offer in the Track 2 regional policy dialogue.

HE U Wunna Maung Lwin, Foreign Minister of Myanmar, Yangon, 3 February 2012

Asialink has been ahead of the game in encouraging ‘Asia literacy’ in Australia… [I] commend Asialink for its contribution to fostering Australia’s relations with Asia.

Gillian Bird, DFAT Deputy Secretary and Ambassador to ASEAN, Melbourne, 20 February 2012

I can think of no organisation with a more distinguished history of developing the ability and mindset for engaging with Asia [than Asialink].

The Hon Richard Marles MP, Australian Minister for Trade, Canberra, 8 July 2013

Asialink is ahead of the game. This organisation is more than twenty years old. The Asia Capable Workforce Strategy is a clear sign both of its maturity and its enduring – indeed, expanding – relevance.

Dr Ken Henry AC, Australia in the Asian Century Task Force Chair, Sydney, 6 September 2012
2012 was a landmark year in Australia-Asia relations, not just for Asialink but for the whole country. The release of the Australia in the Asian Century Government White Paper marked a turning point in the history of our engagement with the Asian region. Above all, the White Paper expressed a clear intention to stay the course in Asia, through constant, consistent engagement across sectors.

Asialink has been leading the way in Asian engagement for over 20 years, and 2012 marked a further intensification of this engagement. And we are still leading. This year, we worked in countries where we have never worked before, holding a first-of-its kind dialogue in Yangon, Myanmar.

We also broached new territory closer to home, establishing a permanent presence in Sydney and launching an Asialink chapter in Singapore.

We hope you will find this summary of our impact in 2012 valuable, and we encourage you to be part of the Asialink journey in 2013.

Asialink continued to nurture and build strong regional partnerships in 2012. We have provided opportunities for more school educators to experience Asia through study programs. We have partnered with health ministries across the region to improve mental health services. We have delivered an extensive arts and cultural program across India. And we have formed lasting bonds between Australians and key decision-makers in Myanmar.

Asialink has also been active in providing essential policy recommendations to Australian governments and the business sector through the publication of reports such as Developing an Asia Capable Workforce: A National Strategy and Our Place in the Asian Century: Southeast Asia as ‘The Third Way’. We continue to work toward an appropriately Asia-relevant Australian curriculum.

These pages are testament to the work of a committed and talented staff at Asialink. On behalf of the team, we invite you to reflect on our year in 2012 as we prepare for a full program of activities in 2013.
BACKGROUND

Asialink is an initiative of The University of Melbourne and the Myer Foundation. It is Australia’s leading centre for the promotion of Asia capability, public understanding of Asia and appreciation of Australia’s role in the Asian region. Asialink’s annual program of initiatives spans the arts, education, business, and community sectors.

Throughout 2012, Asialink has strengthened its engagement with governments, business sectors, educators, and cultural organisations in Asia and Australia. Its significance as an Australian institution with a history of more than 20 years was recognised publicly through the Australian Government’s Australia in the Asian Century White Paper.
Mission
Asialink’s mission is to build an Asia capable, deeply Asia-engaged Australia, through innovative programs that build knowledge, skills and partnerships.

Reach
Asialink delivers high-level forums, international collaborations, and education and cultural programs in Australia and Asia. Our work engages the business, philanthropic, media, arts, education, health and community sectors.

Programs
Corporate and Public Programs
These programs provide a range of forums and print and online publications to build Asia capability in the business, government, academic and broader communities. Asialink’s second track diplomacy initiatives bring together influential participants from across Asia and from Australia to help solve issues of common concern and contribute to building closer Asia-Australia relationships.

Asia Education Foundation
Asialink’s education arm, the Asia Education Foundation (AEF), is a joint activity of Asialink and Education Services Australia. The AEF provides teachers, education leaders and school communities with innovative programs, curriculum resources and networks to support the achievement of Asia literacy for every young Australian.

Arts
Asialink Arts aims to promote cultural understanding, information exchange and artistic endeavour between Australia and Asian countries. It does this through reciprocal residencies, touring exhibitions, and its writing program.

Asia Australia Mental Health
The organisation’s community health program, Asia Australia Mental Health (AAMH), is a consortium of St Vincent’s Health, the Department of Psychiatry at The University of Melbourne and Asialink. AAMH partners with academic, government, community organisations and peak bodies in Asia and Australia to support culturally appropriate community based mental health reform in the Asia-Pacific region.

Asialink has continued to expand its policy footprint in the business, education and diplomacy sectors, positioning itself through a new mission statement, three discrete White Paper submissions and leadership of the Developing an Asia Capable Workforce initiative. The publication of the government’s Australia in the Asian Century White Paper in 2012 was a landmark event in the history of Australia’s engagement with Asia. Asialink is heavily profiled in the White Paper – its arts, education and workforce capability activities are all cited – and had significant input into its content and direction, hosting roundtables for Dr Ken Henry AC with partners from business, education and the tertiary education sector.

Asialink continues to work on the ground to strengthen Australia’s relationships with the Asian region, administering several diplomatic and business forays into Asia over the course of the year, and establishing new avenues, such as the Australia Myanmar Business Development Taskforce, for Australians to engage with the region.
Business

In 2012, Asialink expanded its advocacy work in and with the business community through the publication of Developing an Asia Capable Workforce: A National Strategy. It also continued to work with leading businesses and industry peak bodies to deliver thought leadership projects on Asian engagement.

Key initiatives

- Published the fifth PwC Melbourne Institute Asialink Index, an annual index analysing Australia’s engagement with 25 economies in Asia across the key indicators of trade, investment, research and business development, migration, tourism and humanitarian assistance.

- Launched the Index as a web app (asialinkindex.com.au), including video content and a special segment on SME trade with Asia, attracting online visitors from around the globe.

- Published the second biennial ANZ Services Report, a product of the Index specifically designed to measure engagement through the services sector, this year launched by Trade Minister and Minister Assisting the Prime Minister on Asian Century Policy the Hon Dr Craig Emerson MP.

- Launched Developing an Asia Capable Workforce: A National Strategy, with Dr Ken Henry AC and Asialink Taskforce Chair, Mike Smith OBE, CEO ANZ. The importance of Asia capabilities is highlighted by the government’s White Paper, which draws heavily on the work of the Asialink Taskforce.

- Established the Australia Myanmar Business Development Taskforce to foster closer economic cooperation between Australia and Myanmar, following from a successful business visit to Myanmar led by Asialink’s Chairman in May 2012.

- Continued to expand the AEF’s Asia Literacy Ambassadors project, launching an online Speakers Bureau and recruiting 90 new Ambassadors from the business community and 47 new schools across Australia to participate in a variety of school-business partnerships.
Diplomacy

In 2012, Asialink focused its ‘Track II’ diplomatic efforts on facilitating a two-way exchange of perspectives through dialogue and publications, and worked collaboratively with colleagues throughout the Asian region to strengthen Asia-Australia relations.

Key initiatives

- Published a 4th volume of Asialink Essays on critical issues affecting Asia-Australia engagement, drawing on some of the region’s leading minds:
  1. Myanmar across the threshold by Hamish McDonald.
  2. We cannot be just Deputy Sheriff in the Asian Century: Think again about ASEAN by Prof Anthony Milner AM.
  3. The right side of history by John Brumby.
  4. Stopping the boats?: Only if we cooperate with our neighbours by John Buckley.
  5. An insider’s view of the Australian relationship by Dewi Fortuna Anwar.

- Convened the 2012 Asialink Conversations in Yangon, Myanmar – one of the first non-government dialogues of its type to be staged in Myanmar’s reform period – in partnership with the Myanmar Institute of Strategic and International Studies. Over 40 participants from ASEAN, Australia and Japan, including senior presidential advisers to the reformist government of President Thein Sein, gathered for two days to discuss some of the major issues facing Myanmar and the region.

- Delivered the fifth ASEAN-Australia-New Zealand Dialogue in Kuala Lumpur in December.

- Collaborated on the Australia-ASEAN Emerging Leaders Program (A2ELP), including participation of one Asialink staff members as a delegate alongside young leaders from the 10 ASEAN member states and Australia.

- Published the Asialink Commission report, Our Place in the Asian Century: Southeast Asia as 'The Third Way', with supporting statements from former foreign ministers Gareth Evans and Alexander Downer.
Public events and boardroom briefings
In 2012, the Asia Education Foundation secured an additional $1.85 million to expand its current work in study tours, linking schools using technologies, professional learning for principals and teachers, online curriculum resources and contributing to the development of the new Australian Curriculum.

MEDIA AND COMMUNICATIONS

In 2012 greater emphasis was placed on changing the organisation’s communication products based on the insight derived from new analytics. Social and professional networking sites have been cemented as key modes for delivery of news, while website content has been redeveloped for optimised viewing on mobile phones and tablet devices.

In a year when extensive domestic public discussion was devoted to Asia relations, the communications team further developed its media liaison activities, with stand-out achievements including the first live video stream from Myanmar to ABC TV, in addition to live coverage of the Asialink Taskforce launch and Chairman’s lunch. Asialink was also at the forefront of comment and analysis following the release of the Asian Century white paper, with Kathe Kirby and Jenny McGregor making a combined ten television appearances over two days – in addition to 30+ print references.
Key achievements

- New design of Asialink website produced – with adaptive functionality to support consumption on iPhone, iPad and Android, which now constitute over 40% of our access medium. New site goes live in mid-2013.
- Social media engagement has risen by over 400% in a year, including 1600+ Twitter followers, and 750+ Facebook likes. The new LinkedIn Group (now at 500+ members) hosts regular, vibrant discussion.
- Website traffic has risen steadily, particularly around the release of the Asian Century white paper.
- Redevelopment of the Access Asialink E-Newsletter inside industry-leading Campaign Monitor software, allowing unprecedented formatting options and advanced analytics.
- Developed a Next Generation series event into a televised studio-style debate with Australia Network (ABC TV), airing to hundreds of thousands of viewers across Australia and the region.
- Media list now exceeds 400 contacts, including key figures in the national press gallery. This development resulted in multiple syndications of Asialink news by Australian Associated Press.
